- It's Opening Night for the long anticipated LEGALLY BLONDE. Tickets are sold out for Friday's performance. There are a small number of tickets available for Saturday's show at 7:30 and a little bit more for Sunday's show at 2:00. You can still order your tickets online at Ticketsource.us/cvutheatre. You'll be able to tell at the website if the show has been sold out. Or you can get tickets today at the main office. We wish the cast and crew and band a great show weekend. Omigod You Guys - Break a leg!
  - Yearbook Club Needs You. Psst...you can earn a paycheck here! Yearbook club will have their first meeting on Tuesday, 10/30, 3:15-4:30 in the main office. We will be working on page layouts for fall 2018 and spring 2018 sports, layouts for portrait pages, interviews with students in all grades, Prom 2018, candid photos of students around campus, and business advertising sales. We will meet once each month, then you will work on your assignments online whenever possible. Students have the opportunity to receive $ for completed work. Interested in hearing more? Contact Carol Fox via email cfox@cvsdvt.org or stop in the Main Office to see her. Applications can be found in each House Office, in the Direction Center, and in the main office.
  - EnACT is hosting Taona Makunje Chigwenembe on Friday, 11/9 after school from 3-5pm. Taona is a visiting fellow from Malawi working at 350Vermont through November; she will lead a Climate Justice workshop that also gives us time to start to develop art pieces (poems/spoken word, music, paintings are all options) reflecting our perspectives on climate justice and/or proposed solutions and actions. All CVU students are welcome to attend this free workshop. There will also be free food. Join us!
  - Last day of Lost and Found being up for grabs – check out the table in the front of the Main Office. Will go away at the end of the day.

WORD OF THE DAY: Fugacious

1. Lasting a short time: evanescent

Fugacious is often used to describe immaterial things like emotions, but not always. Botanists, for example, use it to describe plant parts that wither or fall off before the usual time. Things that are fugacious are fleeting, and etymologically they can also be said to be fleeing. Fugacious derives from the Latin verb fugere, which means "to flee." Other descendants of fugere include fugitive, refuge, and subterfuge.

Examples of FUGACIOUS

The rock band's rise in popularity turned out to be fugacious, and within two years its members had moved on to other careers.

"The maple leaves are a yellow light signaling me to slow down and take in the last pulse of color of a fugacious fall."

— David Johnson, The Daily News of Newburyport (Massachusetts), 26 Nov. 2013
