Applications available in house offices and in the main office, or online at travel.cvuhs.org

CVU has sponsored successful Habitat for Humanity trips for almost 20-years and we are excited to offer this trip once again to interested students, age sixteen by 4/23/18. This is an incredibly powerful win-win trip for students. Students get to experience another part of the country and help others who are less fortunate than many of us. They will also meet CVU students they may not have met before, creating new friendships that last a lifetime. They get to have an "alternative" spring break and enjoy some warm weather, and, it looks good on their transcript/resume or makes an excellent college essay!

This year we will be traveling to Winston-Salem, North Carolina over April vacation to participate in their Collegiate Challenge program. We will be leaving on Saturday, 4/21 and returning on Sunday, 4/29. On both legs of our trip we will be spending a night in Washington, DC. Since we are limited as to the number of students we can bring (23), and interest in the past has been high, we ask that you complete the attached application and submit it as soon as possible. Selections are based on a "first come, first served" basis for all eligible students. A deposit of $100 is required to reserve a space for your student. The remaining amount will be due in two separate installments. Don't delay in signing up for this trip as we have only 23 spaces available.

WORD OF THE DAY: Pettifogger

A lawyer whose methods are petty, underhanded, or disreputable

The "petti-" in pettifogger is an alteration of petty, a word that has traditionally described someone who is disreputable and small-minded. Where we get fogger is less clear; it may come from Fugger, the name of a successful family of 15th- and 16th-century German merchants and financiers. Variations of the name were used for people who sought their money dishonestly; in its application to lawyers, starting in the 16th century, it described one who quibbled over petty details for a fee.
